SAY THEIR NAMES

The time of concern is over. No longer are we asked how we are doing.

Never are the names of our loved ones mentioned to us.

A curtain descends. The moment has passed. Lives slip from frequent recall.

There are exceptions: close and compassionate friends, sensitive and loving family. For most, the drama is over.

The spotlight is off. But for us, it will never end.

Say Their Names to Us

It hurts to bury their memory in silence. What they were in flesh is no longer with us. What they are in spirit stirs within us always.

They are of our past, but they are part of our now.

Say Their Names to Us

We are what we have to be. What we have lost you cannot feel.

What we have gained you cannot see.

They and we will meet again, though in many ways we have never parted.

They and their lives play light songs on our minds, sunrises and sunsets on our dreams. They are real and shadow, were and are.

Say their names to us and say their names again.

They are our loved ones, and we love them as we always did.

Say Their Names!

National Crime Victims' Rights Week • April 18–24, 2021

SUPPORT VICTIMS.
BUILD TRUST.
ENGAGE COMMUNITIES.

WE REMEMBER THEM

As we open our eyes each morning and see the dawning of another day, we struggle to accept the reality of a world without them.

We Remember Them

We yearn to hear once more their distinctive laugh and see their beautiful smile;
without them, the sky is not as blue; the sun is not as warm.

We Remember Them

Spring flowers fall to lift our spirits as they used to do;
only in our dreams do we hold them once again.

We Remember Them

In our most private moments, we endure overwhelming emptiness.
We hold our family more closely, knowing we are not promised tomorrow.
Our grief is mirrored in each other's eyes.

We Remember Them

Colors, songs, and photos remind us of their special brand of magic, not to be repeated. We share precious memories, and in this sharing,

We Remember Them

We know so long as we draw breath, they are with us; every precious memory is a tribute to their uniqueness. We know that love is eternal.

We Remember Them

Seasons change, but our longing for them remains. We go on, though not the same, accepting some small solace in the fact that nothing is ever lost,
and they are loved so much.
